

former conductor of who has stood by them to the last extremity of those who never swerved from what he and they believe to be the right, and who preferred rather to yield the powers and honors of his station, than prove false to the trust which had been confided to him. Under these circumstances, it is not surprising that himself and assured beyond the possibility of doubt that public justice is awarded to him in the minds of a large portion of his fellow-citizens. Mr. Van Buren may well bear into retirement, a satisfied and grateful heart. [Philadelphia Pennsylvania, March 19.]

NEW HAMPSHIRE ELECTIONS—The Boston Post says, we have returns from 138 towns, which gave—For June 25-52; Stevens 20,550; Democratic majority 7,773. In November the same towns gave—For the new Administration, 21,000; Democratic nett gain Buren 31,584; Harrison 25,363; Democratic majority November 1,658.

THE PRINCIPLE ON WHICH THE PROSCRIPTION WORKS.

We have felt it our duty to ascertain the manner and grounds on which our removals are made by the new Administration. For this purpose, we inquired of Judge Burchard the process of his removal. He was sent for by Mr. Ewing, the Secretary of the Treasury. He was told, that, among the arrangements determined by the new Administration, was that of putting a political friend in the office of Solicitor-General. He was told by him, and the Secretary, that he was the person of preference, it was a removal.

Mr. Burchard thanked Mr. Ewing for the courtesy of the interview, and availed himself of it to inquire whether the course adopted in regard to him proceeded from any distrust of his fidelity, capacity, or any complaint made as to the discharge of his duties. Mr. Ewing assured him, that the Secretary was not averse to the re-appointment of the friends of the Administration.

There never was a clearer illustration of the principle of proscription for opinions sake, than is afforded in this example. Judge Burchard, all who know him can attest, is a man of undoubted integrity—of unquestionable capacity for the position he occupied. He is inflexibly impartial, and an unswerving industrious in the discharge of his duties—always accessible, and uniformly available to every one having business with the department. He is, however, an unbending Democrat, and maintained in office the independence of opinion which belonged to him as a man. Hence he was the first man at the head of an office removed.

The crime of Judge Burchard's opposition to Federalism. The virtue of his successor (Mr. Penrose) consists in the fact that, from a violent opponent, he became instantaneously transformed into an ardent friend of the Bank of the United States; having been voted for by the people of his Senatorial district in his first character, and voting himself, in the Senate, as pro Federalist, for the Bank, and the Secretary of the Treasury, as his constituents.

He afterwards joined Thaddeus Stevens in the attempt to put down the will of the majority of the people of Pennsylvania, and maintain the power of Rittner's friends in the Legislature against the decision of the polls—Globe.

THE PROSCRIPTION LIST.

We put up a list of the proscribed to-day from the National Intelligencer, (in the last Enquirer), which will be kept standing, and will be extended from time to time with such comments on individual cases as full information will enable us to make.

The case of the removal of Mr. Morgan, to make room for Mr. Curtis, is of itself a sufficient comment on the hypocrisy of the professions contained in the Inaugural, and all the present President's previous declarations against removals for opinions sake. Every body knows that Mr. Morgan's course through life has been perfectly free from party intolerance, and that, with every consideration for the place he filled, (and which he could not have abused to any party purpose during the late election, as he did not then occupy it,) he is turned out simply to make room for a ruthless partizan, who has the confidence of no human being, but as a Daigley, to fight, to acquire, and keep the spoils.

Judge Burchard, Solicitor-General, and Colonel Gardner, Auditor of the Post Office. These constitute another practical commentary on the horrors of the Harrison party at the spoils and at proscription.

They furnish another example of the difference to the people, who have been deceived by the Harrison pledges to imitate Washington, and act as the head of the nation, and not of a party.

What had John J. Morgan or Stephen W. Eaton done to require removal without going through the list—Who proscribed now for opinions sake? Who so proper for the opinion of the people, and nothing but the spoils? Even the judiciary establishment is attacked, which have barely escaped in the highest party times, and Judge Burchard, as Solicitor of the Treasury—a most able and indefatigable officer—is the first victim.
